

ABSTRACT

A mobile communication device includes a memory and a display. The mobile communication device is configured to display a message on the display whenever the mobile communication device is powered on and while the mobile communication device is refreshing the memory. The mobile communication device includes a transceiver and can be configured to receive an automated download of a new message through the transceiver.

2005-04-04 10:00:00